EDWARD A. OLDHAM,
Editor and Proprietor.

OBITUARY NOTICES, ETC.

The Globe finds it necessary to charge one cent per word for obituary notices, resolutions of respect, recommendations for office and similar matters, and the copy must be accompanied by the cash. Where the applicant is a patron of the paper, we make no charge for the first 30 words, all over that number will be charged at above rates.

CORRESPONDENTS WANTED

The Globe desires a correspondent in every town in the state—writers who know a news item when they see it, and who will stop writing when they have told all they started out to say.

LOCAL READERS

Will be inserted in The Globe at ten cents per line each insertion, or five cents per line each insertion when as many as ten lines at a time are inserted.

Our State exchanges are requested to change the name of The Plant to The Globe, on their mailing books.

Subscribers not getting their paper promptly and regularly are requested to notify the office at once.

The price of The Globe is 50 cents a month. We have no complimentary copies.

The Weather To-day.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11.—The weather indications for tomorrow in North Carolina are: Fair till Sunday night, stationary temperature, variable winds. Virginia, fair till Sunday night, slightly warmer, southerly winds.

CITY ITEMS.

W. W. Kitchen and J. S. Merritt were in the city yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson, of Danville, are visiting Mr. R. E. Lyon.

Mr. J. A. Noel, editor of the Roxboro Courier, was in the city last evening.

Quite a crowd was brought in by the evening train from Raleigh yesterday.

Rev. Mr. Lacy, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Bingham School, is in the city.

The family of Capt. J. J. Mackay left yesterday for their new home in Wilmington.

Mr. C. G. Holland, of Danville and Rev. J. J. Renn, of Franklin, are visiting Mr. J. S. Carr during the tabernacle meetings.

Mr. Jas. E. Schoolfield and his niece, Miss Annie Morris, of Danville, are the guests of Mr. E. J. Parrish and Mr. J. S. Carr respectively, during the meetings.

Our citizens are requested to send to The Globe either by postal or carrier, the names of visitors from other towns here attending the Sam Jones meeting.

Dr. W. A. Woollen, Mr. J. E. Walker, president of the Naomi Cotton Mills and J. A. Fichols, of Randleman, a civil engineer of the Richmond & Danville railroad, were in the city yesterday.

The excursionists from Henderson and from Oxford made a large floating population for Durham yesterday. Many of them declare themselves so highly pleased that they intend visiting us again shortly.

Cards have been issued for the marriage of Miss Sallie Lindsay, daughter of Dr. W. O. Jones, of High Point, to Professor Charles L. Smith, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on the 24th of October.

Serious Runaway.

An accident occurred at Orange factory last evening which nearly resulted in the death of a lady. In company with a gentleman she was being driven in a buggy past the factory when the horse being skittish became frightened overturning the buggy and throwing her violently on the ground her back striking a sharp pointed rock and seriously injuring her. Her name, it was learned, was Nannie Myers.

Bond Offerings Yesterday.

HOUSES OF SUGAR.

Claus Spreckels' New Idea and What Different Ones Think of It.

The scheme of utilizing sugar for building purposes in place of marble, which the redoubtable Claus Spreckels declares to be feasible, has stirred up lots of interest among the sugar men as well as stone cutters.

Spreckels says his sugar experts were asked to find a means for hardening the sugar heshipped to Mexico, and they did so. It had become necessary to get a process of this kind, as the sugars dissolved and washed considerably while en route there.

The success of the new process made him think the crystals could be hardened for building purposes and made to withstand heat and water.

It has been demonstrated to his satisfaction, he declares, that the thing can be done. The tests already made show that sugar blocks for interior decoration could even now be furnished. Great blocks for the exterior of buildings, he thinks, will be eventually, and he predicts that the proposed new wing of the White House in Washington will be of that material.

A reporter talked with a lot of the trust people the other day about the new discovery. They had consulted with their experts about it, and all were at a loss to conceive of a method which might effect the desired result.

No matter how hard sugar was made water would dissolve it, and it would melt under nominal heat. There was no comparison between sugar and marble. They were composed of entirely different elements. Marble, carbonic acid and lime, which form into a compound of carbonate of lime. Water has no effect on this substance, and it would take ten minutes of a white heat temperature to disintegrate it, the experts said.

Sugar is composed of oxygen, hydrogen and carbon, a compound substance that heat, water or shock readily drives back into its elements, and no chemical substance can preserve its integrity, the sugar men conclude, and rest contented.

Of a similar opinion is Dr. Gideon F. Moore, the eminent chemist, who is constantly called upon to make sugar tests. But he does not say that a process generally unknown to science at present may not have been discovered.

He showed the reporter a block of sugar about an inch square in thickness. It was perfectly transparent. It looked hard, but could be easily cut with a knife or bitten.

"There is the natural formation of sugar crystals," the doctor explained. "The sugar is in the same state now as it was when pulverized. Just taste it; you will see it is as sweet as ever."

"Pressure could not solidify crystals more than they are now, and I know of no chemical preparation that could possibly do it."

"If a way of making sugar harder than this has been found it is something new in chemistry, and if the blocks can be made insensible to water or nominal heat the discovery is wonderful."

The statement that Spreckels made about the new building sugar, putting marble completely in the shade, because of its superior beauty, no one who studies each specimen under a magnifying instrument will doubt.

The sugar is like a rainbow, excepting that each crystal represents an irregular block.

If finely cut as marble is, a block of sugar might reflect every ray of light, making it glisten like a diamond.

There can be no question about its beautiful effects, and if it can be prepared at all, it can be gotten up much cheaper than marble.

The only difficulty to be overcome is the natural disposition of the sweet stuff to melt. The trouble now is that sugar is sugar whether soft or hard, and a piece from the corner stone of a sugar house would taste just as good to the small boy as if it were stolen from a bowl.—New York News.

Home at Last.

The old dandy, an account of whose trip from Louisiana to Georgia was published in The Eagle some time ago, found his young bosses at last. He belonged to Mr. Tillman, of Tatnall, and was sold as a slave long before the war and taken to Louisiana. As the shadows of old age began to gather around him, his heart yearned for his childhood's home, and so last spring the old fellow, with his wife and children, traveled all the way back in a horse and cart. He had got to Tatnall, but found that his old boss had gone the way of all mankind, and Mr. Joseph Tillman, one of his young bosses, with that feeling that every southerner has for the good old time dandy, brought the old fellow to his home in Bulloch, gave him a house and land to tend, where, with his young bosses to help him, he hopes to spend the remainder of his days in peace and contentment.—Statesboro (Ga.) Eagle.

How Florida Girls Capture Clams.

One day last week four young ladies stopping at Colin Park went up one of the creeks after clams. They were rather late, and the tide was rising rapidly when they reached the clam banks. Not to be outdone, they hunted the desired clams by feeling for them with their feet, until the tide rose so high that they were in water up to their necks. When a clam was sounded a dive followed, and the clam was landed in the boat. Sixty-two clams were the result, and the chowder pot was large and well filled.—Savannah News.

The most famous barber now living, probably, is about to celebrate his silver wedding in Paris. He is M. Adolph Paques. He was the greatest of his kind sixty years ago. He numbered among his clients Chateaubriand, Lamartine, Victor Hugo, Theodor Gautier, Mlle. Mars and Malibran.

Miss Rebecca Fairbanks, the last of a family that came over in 1635, is said to be still living in a house, in Dedham, Mass., that was brought over in the year mentioned and located on its present site at that time. The Fairbanks scale men came of this family.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

During the last eighty years 8,000,000 people have died of phthisis in France.

The total indebtedness of the various churches in Amsterdam exceeds $120,000.

The French government will, within a year, take control of all the telegraph lines.

The Russian language has now been formally imposed on the German and all other inhabitants of the Baltic provinces.

The German officials on the eastern frontier of France are said to be more than troublesome with their passport regulations.

It is said the English government contemplate selling the Netley hospital, which is declared to be too costly an establishment.

The latest order concerning the Russian railways is that only men who have served in the army are to be employed on them.

The municipal council of Dijon has determined to name one of its streets after M. Eiffel, who was born within the city walls.

Forestry is a national object in Switzerland. In 1888 nearly six million coniferous trees were planted, besides nearly half a million of other plants.

Melrose Abbey is falling into decay, and the restorers are now at work upon it. A number of young trees and other growth were displacing the masonry.

A band of brigands has been terrorizing Macedonia, which, upon final capture, was found to include several priests, a Greek archimandrite, the superior of a monastery, and three "ladies."

Liverpool last year yielded 15,000 cases of drunkenness from a population of little over half a million. The London police area, with its four and three-quarter millions of people, yields only 2,000 cases more than Liverpool.

The prime of England has two chairs considerably over one thousand years old—the chair of Augustine at Canterbury and the chair in which he sits at Lambeth, which belonged to the Abbot of Reculver in the Seventh century.

L'Observateur Romano gives all the details of the precautions taken by King Humbert to guard the Vatican day and night, for fear the pope should escape. No less than twenty-four special agents have been appointed for this mission.

The census of Bulgaria and eastern Roumelia gives the population of the two principal areas as being 3,154,373, of whom 2,326,250 are Bulgarians, 607,000 Turks, 58,000 Greeks, 50,000 gypsies who have no fixed residence, and 23,400 Jews.

The Russian minister of the interior is making arrangements whereby all children at present under age, whose parents have been Russian subjects by naturalization, shall be declared to be Russian subjects and liable for military service.

The London season just over was the gayest ever known. On an average there were said to be about seven "good" parties going on each night for three months. None of these, it was estimated, would have cost less than £200 a piece—many, of course, costing several times that.

The longest uninterrupted debate on record was, on Aug. 1, brought to a close by the New Zealand house of representatives. It had caused a continuous sitting of seventy-six hours, entirely given up to the discussion of a representation bill. Yet the debate was not finished.

It is said that the members of an embassy from the sultan of Mandara to Berlin became so exhilarated by the wine and beer served to them in Bismarck's palace that they executed a war dance in the prince's parlor, but with disastrous consequences to several pieces of furniture.

ROYAL FLUSHES.

The Princess of Wales is a skillful pianist.

The Prince of Wales plays the banjo fairly well.

The Duke of Edinburgh is a persistent but poor violinist.

The Duke of Connaught amuses himself with the flute.

The czar of all the Russias plays a handsome silver cornet.

Four sons of the king of Siam are being educated in England.

Queen Marguerite of Italy makes herself happy at the piano.

The beautiful empress of Austria plays splendidly on the zither.

Queen Victoria and her daughter Louise play well upon the organ.

Some unknown admirer of the Prince of Wales recently gave him $50,000.

Queen Elizabeth of Romania plays with equal skill on the harp and piano.

Prince Henry of Prussia is a composer and a performer on the violin and piano.

Queen Victoria is said to contemplate bestowing the Order of the Bath upon Thomas A. Edison.

The empress of Japan is proficient on the "koto," the national instrument, which is a kind of big zither.

Prince Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, has become very popular with his subjects. This is surprising in light of the fact that he paints his cheeks.

Among the pensioners on the English civil list is Prince Lucien Bonaparte, who gets $1,250 per annum for "distinguished literary services."

A rumor has been flying about in London to the effect that Prince "May," of Teck, is to marry the Hon. John Baring, eldest son of Lord Revelstoke.

The shah of Persia purchased a number of valuable paintings in Paris. They were all cut decollete in execution, but were very high necked in price.

The Indian tour which Prince Albert Victor—or Prince Edward as he prefers to be called—is about to undertake will extend over several months.

Princess Victoria is the most original and most thoughtful of the Prince of Wales's daughters. Princess Maud excels her mother's amusements. Princess Louise has been her father's favorite.

In order to distinguish the royal princesses of England, they will be designated henceforth as, "of Great Britain and Ireland," like Princess Beatrice, or as, "of Wales," like the Duchess of Fife.

King George of Greece can play all kinds of tunes on hand bells and wine glasses of different shapes. He can also play the "cymbalum," an instrument played only by the Tziganes of Hungary.

The Duke of Sparta and Princess Sophia, of Prussia, who are to be married presently, are industriously studying each other's native language. The duke has got on so well that he recently wrote the German emperor a letter in German, and the princess can now talk Greek a little.

Emperor William was specially pleased with the performance of the artillery and the volunteers at Aldershot, but while in England nothing amused him so much as the fall of the unlucky German admiral, whom he shook warmly by the hand and reassured with these words: "I honor your dismounting to greet me."

Montana's Political Situation.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—A special dispatch from Helena, Mont., says: The vote of Jefferson county was considered yesterday, the result being that the Democrats lose the State Senator. This leaves the upper house of the legislature a tie, but the Democrats will have a majority of seven on joint ballot. The canvass of the vote in all the counties will not be completed before tomorrow, if then.
